

DIRECTOR OF PUBLICATIONS

Marc V. Schanz, director of publications, oversees and cultivates Mitchell's studies, issue briefs, papers, website content, marketing materials, and other publishing products. He also advises Mitchell's staff, outside authors and contributors, and aids their writing, research, and engagement efforts. Schanz oversees editorial standards for Mitchell products, and works with Mitchell's U.S. Air Force fellows to shape their written work and help them engage with the policy community in Washington, D.C. and beyond.

Prior to joining Mitchell, Schanz spent over a decade as an editor and reporter for AFA's flagship airpower journal, Air Force Magazine. First as associate editor, then as the magazine's senior editor since 2010 until October 2015.

During his time with Air Force Magazine, Schanz researched and reported on the US Air Force and the Department of Defense's operations, policies, programs and missions around the world. He visited numerous countries where Air Force and US military forces conducted operations, observed exercises, and conducting interviews with numerous senior leaders and airmen alike at Air Force units, wings, bases, squadrons, and other locations. Prior to joining AFA, Schanz worked as a newspaper reporter in North Carolina and California --- focusing on federal and state government affairs, U.S. military aviation, crime and public safety, and the U.S.-Mexico border region.

Schanz is a 2002 graduate of the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, and received his M.A. in International Affairs at Georgetown University in May 2013, focusing his research on US security and foreign relations with East and Southeast Asia.
